Weekly performance for the Dow Jones Industrial Average, Standard & Poor's 500 Index, and NASDAQ Composite index is measured from the close of trading on Friday, March 5, to Friday, March 12, close. Weekly performance for the MSCI-EAFE is measured from Friday, March 5, open to Thursday, March 11, close. Weekly and year-to-date 10-year Treasury note yield are expressed in basis points.

Dow 32,000

Stocks marched higher as bond yields leveled off and the $1.9 trillion stimulus bill moved through the legislative process. A muted inflation number and a better-than-expected jobless claims report evidenced an improving economy absent an attendant rise in inflation.⁴

The technology sector was particularly volatile, with the Nasdaq Composite falling into correction territory to start the week as investors rotated into cyclical opportunities.

Technology rebounded strongly as bond yields stabilized and bargain hunters purchased tech names at reduced prices. The bounceback propelled the S&P 500 to a record high, while the reopening trade drove the Dow Industrials above 32,000 for the first time.^{5,6}

The week ended on a mixed note, with the Dow and S&P 500 adding to their record closes and the Nasdaq Composite trimming its weekly gain.

Treasury Auctions

Treasury auctions to finance federal spending are usually staid affairs, but investor trepidation was high ahead of last week's auctions of 10-year and 30-year Treasuries. Investors were concerned that lukewarm demand amid a huge supply had the potential to drive yields higher and take the pressure on stock prices lower.

As it turned out, Wednesday's auction of 10-year Notes was received with adequate demand, helped by a tame February inflation number and strong overseas interest. The following day's 30-year auction also went relatively smoothly, though the auction yield was 36.2 basis points higher than last month's auction. Despite $120 billion of federal debt issuance last week, yields steadied, easing investors' interest rate concerns for the moment.⁷

Tax Tip

Couples Who Work Together, Tax Together

As more households decide to start a business, many couples find themselves learning about the tax responsibilities related to that business. There are some things to consider when working together.

Here are a few items to consider:

- You should first establish if you have a partnership business (where both spouses have an equal say in the affairs, services, and capital of the business) or an employee/employer relationship (one spouse substantially controls management decisions). These relationships face different tax situations.
- If there is an employee/employer relationship, the second spouse (employee) may be subject to income tax, Social Security, and Medicare.
- If there is a partnership relationship, you may need to report the business income on Form 1065, US Return of Partnership Income.
